

Technical Assistance

CDC provides technical assistance through specific technical assistance programs, which have been described in the “CDC and ATSDR Center, Institute, and Offices” section of this report. In addition, CDC offers many free resources to public health officials and others with information and tools they can adapt and use.

For cross-cutting issues, concerns, or requests, or for assistance in reaching a specific CDC program, contact CDC’s National Center for State, Tribal, Local, and Territorial Public Health Infrastructure and Workforce \(Public Health Infrastructure Center\) at infrastructure@cdc.gov.
