SUPPLEMENT

HAWAII

HAWAII.

In Hawaii the number of deaths from all causes during the year 1921 is 3,924 and the population as estimated by the Bureau of the Census is 265,800, giving a rate of 14.8 per 1,000 population against a rate of 17.7 in 1920. The populations used in computing these rates are estimated by the arithmetical method and are based on the Federal censuses of April 15, 1910, and January 1, 1920. The deaths are tabulated by sex, age, race, cause of death, and month of death.

The highest rates per 100,000 population in 1921 are from diarrhea and enteritis (under 2 years), 193; pneumonia (all forms), 182.8; tuberculosis (all forms), 162.1; congenital malformations and diseases of early infancy, 107.2; violent deaths (suicide excepted), 93.7; other (organic) diseases of the heart, 82; nephritis, 73.7; cerebral hemorrhage and softening, 73; and cancer, 58.7. These causes together account for 69.5 per cent of the total deaths.

In 1921 the death rate for infants under 1 year of age (140.9 per 1,000 estimated population under 1 year) shows an increase of nearly 14 per cent over the rate in 1920. About 65 per cent of this increase is due to increased rates from diarrhea and enteritis, 20 per cent to bronchopneumonia, and 5 per cent to infantile convulsions, a total of over 90 per cent of the whole increase. The increase in the death rate in 1921 for ages under 5 years is only slightly more than 1 per cent over the corresponding 1920 rate.

Exclusive of deaths of infants under 1 year of age, there is a great reduction in mortality in 1921. This reduction appears especially in age group 20 to 49 years, which has a specific rate of 8.8, a decrease of nearly 38 per cent from the 1920 rate for the same age group. This marked decline in the rate is largely due to the great decrease in the number of deaths from influenza, tuberculosis, and pneumonia (all forms), which, for this age group, show a decrease of 66 per cent from the 1920 rate, whereas the decrease from these causes at all ages is about 51 per cent.
